

Rev. Dr. John Taylor Brantley, C. Ed. D.

The Reverend Dr. John Taylor Brantley serves as pastor of Boger Reformed Church in Concord, North Carolina. He also served from 2020 to 2024 as registrar of Latimer Theological Institute in Waynesboro, VA.

Dr. Brantley earned a Bachelor of Theology (Th.B.) in 2013, a Certificate of Theology in 2015, and a Master of Arts in Christian Education in 2020. In July of 2022 he completed a Doctorate in Christian Education (C.Ed.D.) from Wycliffe Theological Seminary.

In June 2015, Dr. Brantley was awarded The Old North State Award by the governor of North Carolina for exemplary commitment to improving the lives of others through service to disadvantaged children. He was also recognized as a Doctor of the University (D.Univ., honoris causa) by Johann Heinrich Pestalozzi Christian University in 2022.

Known to his parishioners as “Dr. John,” he has a passion for classical Christian education and for shaping the hearts and minds of young people to prepare them for lives of Christian service. He has published a book entitled, “A Practical Method for Planting Viable Christian Schools in the 21st Century,” as well as a Science and Natural Philosophy curriculum for Christian schools and homeschoolers. Dr. Brantley is also an occasional writer for ConfessingAnglicans.com, and he serves as a trustee and Latin teacher at Trinity Springs Christian Academy in Cameron, North Carolina.

Dr. Brantley was reared in eastern North Carolina, outside of Fayetteville, and has been married to his wife, Amanda, since 2011. The couple have two beautiful children. Dr. Brantley and one of his daughters are avid armchair Assyriologists. They have together undertaken the daunting task of learning to read and write Sumerian Cuneiform. Mrs. Brantley is a museum professional, and the whole Brantly family are involved in historic interpretation, reenacting., and historic trades.
